CIA Protested

Nearly 100 Howard University students gathered at noon yesterday on the Law School's steps to protest Central Intelligence Agency slush-funding activities in college student groups. They heard a law school sophomore charge that such activities destroy "the distinction between the communist world and a democratic society with secret-police tactics." The speaker, JeRoyd W. Green, said he represented an ad hoc campus group opposed to CIA recruiting at Howard. At the invitation of the Student Bar Association, a CIA agent will interview students for intelligence positions there Thursday.
